Sail

8.1.5 Sail

References:

Hebrew נֵס (nes) ISA 33:23

Hebrew מִפְרָשׂ (mifras) EZK 27:7

Greek ἀρτέμων (artemōn) ACT 27:40

Description and usage:

The sail was a cloth attached above a boat in such a way as to catch the wind and thus propel the boat through the water.

Translation:

A sail may be rendered in some languages as “piece of cloth to make the ship move” or “cloth on the ship to catch the wind.” In ACT 27:40 the Greek word artemōn may refer to the foresail, that is, a relatively small sail toward the prow or front of the ship.
